

Rules of the Road...

Access is more important than ownership.

Finding what they need is more important to patrons than finding that they need librarians.

Change, learning, and adaptation are routine.

Electronic resources are only part of the total information services provided by the library, but often the mostly commonly used.